NOTES OF DECISIONS

Under a former similar statute, the statute in effect defined poison as "any substance which, when applied to the body externally, or in any way introduced into the system, without acting mechanically, but by its own inherent qualities, is capable of destroying life." Stone v. Shaw Supply Co., (1934) 148 Or 416, 36 P2d 606.

Under a former similar statute, it was negligence per se for a dealer to violate it, and, in a proper case, the jury should have been so instructed. Id.

A manufacturer using an improper label was not, under a former similar statute, liable to a mother for emotional distress and minor injuries flowing from knowledge her son had been injured as a result of such improper label. Rogers v. Hexol, Inc., (1962) 218 F Supp 453.
