Federal Treaty arrangements and an Executive Order of June 30, 1857, established the Grand Ronde Reservation. In 1954, Congress passed the Termination Act which severed the trust relationship between the federal government and the Tribe. In the early 1970s, efforts began to reverse the tide of the termination. On November 22, 1983, with the signing of Public Law 98-165, the Grand Ronde Restoration Act, the task was accomplished. The Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde is a federal recognized Tribe. Its 9,811- acre reservation is located in Yamhill County. The Tribe provides services to its members and other Indians through a variety of programs. The official governing body for the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde is the nine-member Tribal Council, elected by the general membership. Current Tribal enrollment is approximately 5,111 members, a majority of whom live in Oregon. Revenues from gaming and the sale of Tribal timber each year go to support programs and governmental functions. These include the Tribe's education, housing, natural resources and health and wellness services. The Tribe opened its health clinic in 1997, which provides medical and dental services to Tribal members and others Native people residing in the Grand Ronde community. The Tribe operated its own Tribal Court.

The Tribe's largest business enterprise, Spirit Mountain Casino, is in Grand Ronde on Highway 18. Close to 70,000 square feet of gaming floor showcases the most diverse gaming options in the Northwest: Nevada-style slots, the Summit high-stakes room, blackjack, craps, roulette, poker, pai gow, keno, bingo and a large non-smoking playing area. Spirit Mountain Casino now offers more than 17,000 square feet of conference and meeting space with the 2008 opening of a state-of-the-art Events Center.

Overnight guests can stay in one of 254 rooms in Spirit Mountain Lodge (including 12 suites) and have access to two gift shops, a 24-hour mini-mart, gas station, Playworld for youth and seven food venues, including the largest buffet in Oregon.

Spirit Mountain Casino and Lodge employ more than 1,500 people and is the largest employer in Polk County.

The Tribal Governance Center was completed in October 1998 and houses offices of Tribal Council, Administration, Human Resources, Public Affairs, Publications/Smoke Signals, Member Services, Tribal Court and Legal. 2002 marked the completion of the Tribal education complex: Adult education/Library building, Head Start/Preschool, Youth Education and the Gymnasium.

The Grand Ronde Tribal Housing Authority, established in 1996, has completed four Tribal housing developments: Grand Meadows, a manufactured home park, a 38 unit Elder housing complex, a 38unit low income/family complex and a 34 unit market rate housing project.

Services are provided to Tribal members in an 11 county service area that includes Lincoln, Tillamook, Linn, Benton, Lane, Yamhill, Polk, Marion, Multnomah, Clackamas and Washington.

The Confederated Tribes of Siletz is a confederation of many Tribes and bands whose aboriginal homelands extend from NW California to SW Washington including all of Oregon west of the summit of the Cascades. The Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians ceded most of its 20 million acres by Treaties in the 1850's and were settled on the 1.1 million acre Coast Reservation. Drastic reductions to the reservation in 1865, 1875, 1894 and subsequently, left its nearly destitute of lands and resources. The CTSI was terminated in 1956, but in November 1977 the Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians became the second Tribe in the nation and the first in Oregon to be restored to federal recognition. The CTSI currently has a 3,980 acre reservation of restored lands located in Lincoln County. The Tribe has also acquired through purchase and donation an additional 11,192 acres of land in Lincoln, Douglas, Marion, Lane and Multnomah Counties. The Tribe is proud to be one of the first Tribes in the United States to have become part of the Self-Governance Demonstration Project. The CTSI first negotiated its Bureau of Indian Affairs Self-Governance Compact in 1991; and Indian Health Services Self-Governance Compact in 1993. Committed to the improvement of the Tribe as a whole, the nine-member governing Tribal Council has been innovative in exploring options to produce revenue and provide services.

Services are provided to Tribal members in an eleven county service area that includes Lincoln, Tillamook, Linn, Benton, Lane, Yamhill, Polk, Marion, Multnomah, Clackamas and Washington.

Besides its headquarter offices in Siletz, the Siletz Tribe has three area offices located in Portland, Salem and Eugene, which provide a variety of programs for Tribal members and other Indians living within their service areas.

Each office also has outreach services provided by Siletz area program staff: Office Programs include:

The Siletz Tribal Business Corporation (STBC) was established in 2003 to further the Tribe's economic development efforts and promote the general welfare of the Tribe. STBC manages enterprises and property holdings all over western Oregon, including Lincoln City, Depoe Bay, Toledo, Salem, Eugene, Portland and Siletz. Operational enterprises are the two RV Parks—Logan Road RV Park in Lincoln City and Hee Hee Illahee RV Resort in north Salem—along with Northwest Maritime Industrial, that provides sonar, dredging, and underwater reclamation. In 2008, STBC acquired a local print and apparel shop, Imprints, and in 2010, opened Siletz Technologies, a software testing enterprise with 8 initial employees. Also in 2010, STBC is expanding its Small Business service capability.

The Siletz Tribal Business Corporation operates under a Board of Directors to promote the growth of Tribal enterprises and the development and utilization of reservation resources.

Majestically overlooking the Pacific Ocean from the Lincoln City shore, the 157,000 square foot Chinook Winds Casino Resort is Oregon's premier Casino. Owned and operated by the Confederated tribes of Siletz Indians of Oregon, the spirit of the Tribe is captured in the décor of the facility. Chinook Winds Casino Resort opened in 1995.

The Casino includes a waterfall flowing to a pond (designed to resemble Euchre Creek, an important area to the Siletz tribe) where “wishers” can toss their coins for good luck and make a contribution to the Tribe’s educational fund. The round lobby and weave design painted on the exterior give tribute to the tribe’s traditional basket weaving techniques. Salmon, a fish that plays a special and important role in the history of the tribe, decorates many of the interior and exterior areas.

The casino is a Las Vegas –style facility with more than 1,100 slot machines, along with keno, bingo, craps, roulette, blackjack and poker. The convention center has 37,000 square feet of meeting space. The “Concerts by the Sea” showroom seats more than 1,300 people and features monthly headline acts.

The resort features a 227 room hotel; all rooms overlook the Pacific Ocean. The hotel features 61 suites, an indoor heated pool, saunas, and hot tub. The hotel adds an additional 7,000 square feet of meeting space.

Rounding out the resort is an 18 hole golf course, complete with indoor driving range and very equipped fitness center.

Chinook Winds Casino Resort is host to five dining venues. The Rogue River Steakhouse features casual fine dining with a stunning panoramic ocean view. There is after-hours entertainment in the Rogue Lounge. The Siletz Bay Buffet serves breakfast, lunch, dinner and a seafood buffet on Fridays. At the deli, tucked behind the waterfall, you’ll find burgers, clam strips, and more served 24/7. The Chinook Grill located at the Hotel has another breathtaking view of the ocean and features fresh sea food. Finally, Aces, located at the golf course, this sports themed restaurant features two unique attractions. A high definition golf simulator where you swing your own clubs and play some of the most famous course in the world and a hamburger that if you finish it in the allotted time, it’s free.

To serve families, the resort includes a Play Palace with secure, supervised childcare available for up to four hours. Pagars are given to parents visiting the casino. A casino visit is not necessary to use the childcare facilities. The childcare facility also offers a “party room” to host themed birthday parties for up to 14 children. For adults and children, the Games Galore Arcade offers the latest arcade games, air hockey, pool, and pinball; more than 80 games in over 4,000 square feet of space.

Visitors can also enjoy the addition of alcohol service on the gaming floor. As always free parking and free sodas and coffee are a staple service provided by the resort.

The Klamath Tribes are composed of three distinct tribes, the Klamath, Modoc, and Yahooskin Band of Snake Indians. The Klamath Tribes, the largest subjected to the Termination policies of the 1950s, won restoration status in August 1986. However, even since 1975, the Klamath Tribes have maintained a fully functional government. Organized in accordance with its Constitution and bylaws, the Tribes' governmental base is the General Council which consists of all enrolled members age 18 and older.

(The Klamath Tribes have maintained tribal enrollment although the BIA rolls were closed under PL 587 in 1954). Under the General Council's authority, the Tribal Council is the day-to-day governing body for the Tribes. Members of the General Council democratically elect the Tribal Council, including the Tribal Chairman, every three years. Under the authority of the General Council, the Klamath Tribes have entered into a series of cooperative management agreements with federal and state agencies in order to protect and enhance the natural resources of the former reservation, and provide services and employment for some of its members. On June 27, 1997, Kla-Mo-Ya Casino opened. Note: Individual departments can be reached directly at the numbers listed below:

Since federal recognition in December 1982, the Cow Creeks have focused on promoting self-sufficiency for the Tribe and its members. Their most difficult obstacle was opposition by the Bureau of Indian Affairs in their endeavors to force the Tribe into a per capita distribution of a small judgment fund settlement that has been used very effectively to springboard economic development that provides for health, housing and education opportunities for tribal members. Another difficult task has been educating the general public, including county and state governments, of the inherent sovereign rights and status of Tribal governments, as provided for in the US Constitution.

The Cow Creeks signed the first gaming compact with the State of Oregon in 1992, and have proven a valuable asset to Southern Oregon. The Cow Creeks operate the Seven Feathers Hotel and Casino Resort in Canyonville, Oregon. The facility includes Nevada-style casino gaming, a 450 seat bingo hall, gift shop, twenty-four hour restaurant, lounge, sports bar, fine dining room, and other amenities. The 1500 seat Umpqua Grand Ballroom and Convention Center has hosted concerts, boxing and other area events. The adjoining four-star, 156-room Seven Feathers Hotel offers an experience in elegance and taste comparable to the finest west coast hotels. An indoor/outdoor swimming pool and fitness center is extremely popular with guests. Another dimension of the resort is its continuing cabaret show. These shows have proven to be a hit with patrons of all ages. In the spring of 2003, the Tribe opened Stix, a sport bar offering a wonderful array of delicious, fun food.

The Tribal Government Office in Roseburg houses the Gaming Commission, the Tribe-owned Nesika Health Group Insurance Company, and a health clinic with two doctors, two nurse practitioners, a dietician, phlebotomist, and a contract podiatrist.

The Tribe has proven to be a significant factor in employment in Southern Oregon, currently employing over 1100 people, becoming the second largest employer in Douglas County. The Cow Creeks have focused on business diversification by investing casino profits to purchase businesses such as the Seven Feathers Truck and Travel Center, three motels, a graphic design business, a telecommunication business, and a meat-processing business that primarily produces beef jerky. The Tribe also purchased a large beef/hay ranching operation. In addition, Cow Creek has purchased property located on Interstate 5. (Note: All acquired lands of the Tribe have been by purchase.) A primary goal of Cow Creek is to "help people help themselves." The Tribe continually invests in educational, social, health-oriented, and charitable programs for the Tribe and local community. The seven county service areas includes: Douglas, Jackson, Josephine, Coos, Deschutes, Lane and Klamath. Services include: housing, education and healthcare.

Oregon's Approach to State-Tribal Relations And How Local Government May Want to Use Some of It

Karen Quigley, Executive Director, Legislative Commission on Indian Services

Rm 167 State Capitol Building

karen.m.quigley@state.or.us

March 2013

Nearly 40 years ago the State of Oregon recognized the need to have a permanent point of contact and on-going forum for consideration of tribal-state issues and created the Legislative Commission on Indian Services (LCIS), an advisory body of 13 Tribal Leaders and Legislators. A dozen years ago Oregon was the first state in the nation to pass a state-tribal government-to-government relations law which emphasizes the critical importance of establishing and maintaining a variety of ways to learn enough about each other's structures, policies, programs, initiatives, traditions and history to inform decision-makers in both state and tribal government as well as to provide opportunities for their respective programs, departments and staff to exchange relevant information and work together on shared interests. Both LCIS and Oregon's ORS 182.162-.168 have established Oregon's national reputation of cooperation with tribal governments and efforts to reduce litigation. Avoided legal costs are just one of the benefits of good relations. All Oregonians, especially those in rural communities where Tribes are located, have benefited from some positive partnerships that LCIS and Oregon's law have fostered. Some local governments also have a history of exploring ways to cooperate with local Tribes to expand opportunities and provide services in a time of scarce resources in a way that enhances the health, safety and welfare of their citizens, tribal members and non-tribal members. Other local governments may be interested in exploring the same possibility.

LCIS is available to support those on-going efforts on the part of local governments as it does with state agencies. The Commission has an office at the State Capitol which serves as a day-to-day information clearinghouse. The LCIS Executive Director is available via phone, e-mail or for meetings and trainings to suggest ways to initiate, improve or expand interactions with tribal governments.

Here are three suggestions learned from the Oregon Approach that local governments may want to consider. They may serve to increase the likelihood of positive interactions now and in the future. Following these three suggestions is a partial checklist of steps in the process that have worked for state agencies which may work for local governments.

1. Appreciate and Respect the Legal and Historical Basis of Tribal Governments:

Tribal sovereign governments- like other governments- means at a minimum that each of Oregon's nine federally recognized tribal governments has a distinctive legal and political status separate from other sovereigns including other tribal governments. Like other governments, each tribal sovereign has the inherent authority to govern its people and see to their health, safety and welfare, decide requirements for citizenship, pass laws & regulations, tax and spend, create infrastructure and provide governmental services to its citizen members. Tribal governments are not "granted sovereignty." Since the adoption of the U.S. Constitution, Tribes have been acknowledged in the Constitution's treaty and commerce clause. Tribes conducted business as sovereigns-including activities reserved for sovereigns such as signing treaties with the U.S. - before the State of Oregon came into existence in 1859. Tribes, therefore, are the oldest form of sovereigns in Oregon by thousands of years.

One additional feature to bear in mind is the unique relationship that tribal governments have with the federal government based on the federal government's "trust responsibility" and the U.S. Supreme Court determination of the status of Tribes as “domestic, dependent nations.” (“domestic”—i.e., not foreign and “dependent”—i.e., having a special relationship with the federal government separate from the States). This may come into play in some local government-tribal government interactions such as the fee-to-trust process, treaty rights, federal commitments to support tribal self-determination, tribal authority, in certain cases permitting Tribes to get Treatment as a State status regarding Clean Air Act and Clean Water Act implementation, as well as other regulatory authority that may be of interest to local government with jurisdiction of lands adjoining tribal trust or reservation lands. Of note is the potential for federal monies that may flow into an area of the state because of an-going commitment to a Tribe because, e.g., a county is designated by Congressional Act as one or another Tribes’ “service area”. Other reasons local government might want to establish a productive relationship with local tribal governments is because of cultural resources which are protected under state and federal law on lands within a counties borders, infrastructure which a tribe may develop that offers enhanced economic or population growth opportunity to a local jurisdiction (like a water treatment plant, a charter school, a health clinic a tribal enterprise that will create hundreds of new jobs for individuals who will become local government taxpayers and may no longer need county services for the unemployed or underemployed).

2. In order to conduct effective government-to-government relations, one must learn about the distinction between federally recognized tribal governments in Oregon and in other states, non-federally recognized tribal governments, Indian organizations, tribal members of one of Oregon’s nine federally recognized tribal governments, tribal members of Tribes in other states and self-identified Indians.

Oregon’s Approach focuses on the nine federally recognized tribal governments in Oregon and effective relations depends on appropriate dialogue with a tribal government’s duly authorized representative on the subject at hand. State and local government agencies (as well as legislators and federal representatives, for that matter) seem to have no trouble with this concept when dealing with each other (e.g., you know that Deschutes county can’t speak for Klamath county, or that DEQ cannot speak for the Department of Agriculture, or that the Governor of California cannot speak for Oregon,) but often it seems state and local government representatives may not take the time or attention to behave in the same way towards tribal members, tribal governments and Indians in general. Serious misunderstandings can be avoided when we appreciate where all governments share some attributes in terms of certain leaders, departments or individuals having specific authority even though each government may have its own structure, laws, rules, jurisdiction, culture and traditions (including different state agencies and local governments individual “culture”).

Oregon’s Indian population is small—approximately 1.6 % of the population—but the legal status of tribal governments as sovereigns (with rights and responsibilities for critical natural, cultural, economic and social resources within the State’s borders) makes on-going State-Tribal dialogue a necessity and, likewise, suggests the importance of a “good neighbor” policy with respective local governments. In the current weak economy, seeking the most efficient provider of governmental services—avoiding duplication and supporting efforts to create jobs (particularly in rural areas) is a priority for the State, Tribes and local government. The ability to provide infrastructure improvements, educational and social services and natural and cultural resources management may be augmented in several of the state’s or a county’s most highly distressed areas because of a Tribe’s ability to leverage federal dollars related to the federal trust responsibility or income generated from growing tribal enterprises. When tribal governments are able to serve tribal members that may mean the State or local government has some resources freed up that would otherwise have to be dedicated to serving these Oregonians. As an example, for every Tribe that builds a health or dental clinic and is willing to serve tribal and non-tribal members, the State or local government may be able to avoid building their own facility.

Thinking about initiating or improving relations with Tribal governments? Here’s the basis of the Oregon Approach which may provide some guidance and a Partial Checklist for Developing and Maintaining the Local Government-Tribal government –to-government Relationship:

The Oregon Approach encourages state agencies to go on “automatic pilot”—in essence, to ask before adopting a new policy or implementing a new program: Will this agency action affect the interests of tribal government. Should we talk with the appropriate tribal government(s)? When and How?

*Is there value to your constituents (non-tribal and tribal) within your jurisdiction in seeing if there are ways to partner with Tribal governments or to at least stay informed about each other's actions that may have an impact on the other; i.e., to communicate before there is a local government-tribal government "crisis."?

*Do you need a guiding document to start e.g., an MOU, resolution (city and Tribal Council?) committing to building a two-way relationship?

*Do you know the appropriate Tribes you should consider dealing with (i.e., your city/county may be the traditional lands, ceded lands, Congressionally-acknowledged service area of a Tribe whose current government headquarters may be located outside your local government boundaries? Is there more than one Tribal government you should be interacting with given your location? (LCIS Executive Director can assist)

*Do you know the tribal government structure—who you and your staff should be dealing with? (LCIS Director can assist)

*Do you have a key contact in your government who will be the point person for tribal issues? Does this individual have regular communication to brief you and/or assist local government staff in working effectively with local tribal government(s)?

*Would there be any advantages to invite tribal participation when you fill advisory Boards, Commission seats, or when you are planning a local, state, regional or national conference?

*Have you visited the tribal governing Board, toured the reservation, extending a reciprocal invitation to Tribal Leaders and key tribal staff?

*Have you considered "interest based self-assessment" for your local government and considered having a discussion with appropriate tribal governments about any interest-based assessment they may want to share?

*Have you considered having a conversation about the most appropriate way to establish and maintain on-going communication with the Tribal government (quarterly govt-to-govt meetings? Semi-annual? Annual? Leadership level? Program staff level?)

*Do you check the tribal government's website, tribal newspaper, have other ways to keep current, e.g., whether they have had elections and their elected officials have changed?

*Keep in mind that each tribal government is distinct and your experience with one will not necessarily translate into the same type of experience as you may have with another. And, like state and local governments that change priorities potentially every election cycle, so too, may tribal governments with changes in their elected officials.

*Consider the potential advantage of maintaining a positive relationship and effective communication with your tribal government neighbors who have been here for thousands of years and are not going anywhere.

INDIAN EDUCATION PROGRAMS

Title VII Projects

Title VII Indian Education programs are funded through the Indian Education Act which was instituted in 1972 in recognition of the special educational and culturally related academic needs of Indian and Alaskan Native students. The Office of Education, U.S. Department of Education, administers programs funded by the Act. Grants are made through the department's Office of Indian Education to local educational agencies, tribal and Indian controlled schools, state educational agencies, institutions of higher education and Indian tribes, organizations and institutions. Grants are awarded on an entitlement or a competitive basis. These grant-funded projects are designed to improve educational opportunities for Indians and Alaskan Natives and to support the goal of self-determination for Indian communities. An elected parent committee in each school district helps identify those needs and how to best meet them. Part A grants support tribal or Indian-controlled schools or local educational agency projects for elementary and secondary students. Projects funded under Part B include early childhood classes, curriculum development, remedial and enrichment instruction and cultural presentations. Part C awards grants for adult education projects offering components such as life coping skills, ABE/GED preparation and career education.

Johnson O'Malley Programs

JOM programs are funded through the Bureau of Indian Affairs to supplement education services. Indian children from age three through grade twelve, who are at least one-quarter Indian and from a federally recognized Tribe, are eligible for JOM services. JOM programs provide financial assistance for education-related services, leadership development and cultural activities.

Title VII and JOM programs differ in the eligibility requirements: JOM programs serve students from federally recognized tribes for the purpose of supplemental educational activities. Title VII programs serve students primarily in urban areas. Blood degree or federal status of the Tribe is not considered in determining eligibility. The following Indian Education Programs are listed alphabetically by cities in which they are located.
