Forecast shows Legislature well-positioned to build an economy that works for all Oregonians

SALEM – Today, Oregon House Speaker Dan Rayfield (D-Corvallis) issued the following statement after the release of the latest quarterly state economic and revenue forecast:

“Oregon is well-positioned to maintain essential services and build an economy that works for all Oregonians. The state has historic cash reserves and is set up better than ever to handle any potential economic downturn thanks to years of responsible budget management by Democratic leadership. We are poised to take advantage of the upcoming 2023 legislative session, soften the impacts of any potential downturn, make our communities safer, and focus investments on working families and communities of color.”
