House Speaker, Senate President Adjourn 2025 Legislative Session Sine Die

Key accomplishments include expanding access to health care, public safety improvements, and taking steps to rein in the cost of living

SALEM, Ore. – Today, the 83rd Oregon Legislative Assembly adjourned sine die the 2025 legislative session two days before its constitutional deadline, completing a session focused on improving safety and affordability for Oregonians across the state.

House Speaker Julie Fahey (D-Eugene) and Senate President Rob Wagner (D-Lake Oswego) released the following statements:

"This session, we focused on practical, bipartisan solutions to the challenges Oregonians face every day — from lowering the cost of living to expanding access to health care, housing, and public safety. We protected core services in a tough budget year, found common ground on complex issues, and made sure the work happening inside the Capitol reflected the values and priorities of people across the state," Speaker Fahey said. "It wasn't always easy — but we stayed focused, we stayed collaborative, and by in large, we delivered."

"We did a lot to help the people of Oregon this session and we did it by seeking common solutions to the challenges we face," President Wagner said. "I'm proud of my fellow legislators and I look forward to continuing our work that remains unfinished."
